The Deep South's Party Germany Tries a War Hero Cruel Means to Uncertain End

FOR the seventh year the community of Natchez, Miss., is promoting its annual pilgrimage to the original mansions and traditions of the Deep South.

What the Natchez Garden club started back in 1932 has by this time grown to the proportions of a national event. It does double duty: Honoring the Old South for its contribution of one-half of American civilization; and helping the New South by promoting tourist trade in a lovely section of the earth.

We honor Natchez for having capitalized on the materials at hand and built them into a national event of dramatic value and practical worth.

Natchez, as you recall, was the scene of Stark Young's famous novel, "So Red the Rose," many of the mansions described by Mr. Young being on display at this annual pilgrimage March 20 to April 2.

Rural Schools Ask Funds' Diversion Evil Be Corrected

A. B. Wetherington Urges
Public to Demand Legislative Action

NO CHANGE IN TAX

Would Restore to Equalizing Fund Money Diverted From It

The following letter on the rural public school situation, addressed to the teachers of the state, was released to the press Thursday by A. B. Wetherington, Blevins school principal.

Mr. Wetherington is president of the department of rural education of the Arkansas Education Association. The letter follows:

Dear Fellow Teacher: Since the hope of obtaining W.P.A. aid to continue the schools of this state for an eight months term is practically gone because the President, relief authorities in Washington and here have all turned us down, the only place we might seek help is through our state legislature.

The governor has indicated his willingness to consider our request favorably, but no legislation can be enacted unless there is sufficient sentiment over the state in favor of it.

School funds in Arkansas have in the past been promiscuously allocated for other purposes. Is it not time for this practice to be stopped? Is it not time that sufficient school revenue for an adequate school program for all the boys and girls of Arkansas be placed on a permanent and sure basis. Arkansas is able to pay for our citizens should feel obligated for, and our boys and girls are entitled to (1) A reasonable minimum school program, (2) with reasonable financial support, and (3) with reasonable methods of attaining such an educational program.

Mr. Platts outlined a program of school relief at the January 28th meeting of the department of rural education of the Arkansas Education Association which would enable all the schools of the state to have an eight-month term if enacted into law.

This plan avoids any tax increase and does not take away any of the funds now going to the common school fund, but restores to the equalizing fund, funds that have been diverted in the past. Every senator and representative will receive a copy of Mr. Platts' speech in the near future, and in the meantime the senators and representatives all over the state should be contacted and urged to support this program.

Interested citizens should write letters to the governor, and local organizations interested in the public schools should pass resolutions favoring this program.

In many counties of the state professional W.P.A. workers receive larger salaries than the teachers in rural schools. This is not as it should be.

Last year the State of North Dakota passed a 2 per cent sales tax, placing 60 per cent of it in the equalizing fund, and as a result, is boasting that it is now able to maintain a satisfactory school program for all the children of the state.

CRANIUM CRACKERS

Jerome Whitehead, a law professor, startled his students by offering to bet, at odds of 3 to 1, that he could trip them on a hypothetical murder case. His offer was accepted. He then passed a typewritten sheet to each student. On those sheets was this problem:

Morton Giles, a farmer, was getting angry. His farm was near the main highway and time and again tramps would raid his watermelon patch and make off with the fruit. So Giles posted warnings he would shoot the next intruder, loaded his rifle and waited.

The next morning came his opportunity. He emerged from his house just in time to see a ragged tramp, with a watermelon under his arm, climb over the fence surrounding the garden and run across a frozen pond. Giles fired and the tramp plunged forward to the ice, breaking through. When the farmer reached the spot and fished him out, the tramp was dead, but Giles could not say whether he had died of drowning or by the bullet.

New WPA 'Relief' to Go Mainly to Industrial Points

President Sends Expected

Millions Extra

AG BILL IN SENATE

Passed Wednesday by House, Expected to Pass
Senate Thursday

WASHINGTON, (AP)—President Roosevelt asked congress Thursday for an immediate appropriation of 250 million dollars to meet relief needs during the next four and a half months.

"Funds available at this time," the president wrote Speaker Bankhead, "will not only take care of the additional burden caused by the recent increase in unemployment but will require a sharp reduction in the near future in the number on WPA rolls."

WPA officials, anticipating the president's request, said most of the money would be used in industrial centers.

The senate Thursday, amid predictions of passage "before nightfall," took up the administration's farm bill, which was passed Wednesday by the house.

In so doing, the senate laid aside, for the time being at least, the anti-laboring bill against which Southern senators have filibustered since the session started in January.

Capital Loans to Small Businesses

U. S. to Require 125%
Collateral and Repayment in 5 Years

WASHINGTON, (AP)—Last week's unanimous meeting of little business men, who clamored first of all for easier loans with which to expand their enterprises, got results Wednesday.

Secretary of Commerce Roper told reporters that in about a week a plan would be announced for lending government funds to such businesses, and for government insurance of loans granted to them by the banks.

Chairman Jesse H. Jones of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and others in the administration are making a survey of the situation, Roper said, and will formulate the recommendations.

"The loan question appeared to be foremost in the small business men's minds," he said.

The little business men said that while in most cases they were able to get 90-day loans, what they needed was long term funds. When money is used to expand a business a considerable period must sometimes elapse before it can be repaid from profits.

Annual Pilgrimage to Ante-Bellum Homes and Famous Gardens

PUBLIC INSPECTION

Tourists From All Over
Nation Will Visit 20
Selected Mansions

Mrs. Gerard H. Brandon, president of the Natchez Garden club, announces the Seventh Annual Pilgrimage to the ante-bellum homes and gardens of Natchez, Miss., which will be conducted March 26-April 2, inclusive. The Natchez Garden club is the original sponsor of the Annual Natchez Pilgrimage which is now in its seventh year. This organization is a member of the Mississippi Federation and the National Council of State Garden Clubs, Inc.

For one week each spring the wheel of time is turned back more than a century. Citizens and visitors alike are privileged to recapture for a brief space the traditions of gracious living, the customs and manners of an era which has made history, and view the more material proof of that glamorous time when the Southland was at the peak of prosperity.

Natchez, might well be called the ante-bellum capital of the Deep South, whose fine homes and gardens are the mecca for sightseers from all parts of the world. During the Pilgrimage twenty or more century old houses are opened to the public and visitors are received as honored guests by ladies in the hoop-skirts and jewels of their ancestors and gentlemen with sideburns and starched collars.

Special entertainments are planned for each evening. "Heaven Bound," so touching in its sincerity, is rendered by the negro citizens in their old-fashioned church. Southern barbecues on oak-shaded plantation grounds, candle-light suppers, historical pageants, all given a brilliant touch of local color to the week's festivities. The major attraction of the Pilgrimage is the famous Confederate Ball with tableaux depicting life in the South before the War Between the States.

Guests, regardless of what part of the country they are from, rise and cheer to the stirring strains of "Dixie," as the flag bearer, carrying the Confederate flag, marches in followed by the Confederate officers in dress uniform accompanied by their beautiful ladies. This group compose the King, Queen and Court of the ball.

The Natchez Pilgrimage dates have been set to follow the New Orleans Spring Festival. Visitors may enjoy a tour along the Mobile Andean Trail, which is usually at its height at this time, through New Orleans and on to Natchez for the Pilgrimage festivities.

LITTLE ROCK, (AP)—H. S. Grant of Newport notified Secretary of State C. G. Hall Thursday that he had withdrawn as a candidate for congress from the Second Arkansas district in the prospective special election.

Grant withdrew in favor of County Judge Wilbur D. Mills of Searcy. Governor Bailey has not fixed a date for the special election.

LITTLE ROCK.—To prevent Lester Brockelhurst Jr., former Galesburg (Ill.) Sunday school teacher, from committing suicide or injuring himself in his cell in the deathhouse at the state farm near Tucker, prison officials have chained him to the floor and increased his guard.

Brockelhurst, scheduled to die March 4, was placed in irons more than a week ago, several days after Governor Bailey had reset the date for his execution.

Prison officials said Brockelhurst became rather nervous when he learned the date of his execution. He told officials he never would be electrocuted, explaining that there were many other ways to die. As a result, the guard

Deny That Capone Has 'Gone Violent'

Gangster Prisoner in Hospital Merely for Sanity
Observation

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif.—(AP)—Out of the welter of conflicting reports Thursday came a flat denial that Ex-Gangster Al Capone was confined to a strait-jacket in Alcatraz Island's prison hospital.

The only thing definite is that the former Chicago gang chief is in a hospital, not under observation for insanity.

"He has shown no signs of violence since entering the hospital, and has not been in a strait-jacket," said Warden James A. Johnston.

Retirement Pay to Increase This Year

$56,000 Due Workers in 1937, Probably Double
That in 1938

Wage earners of Arkansas may still have approximately $56,000 coming to them as a result of the old-age insurance provisions of the Social Security Act, and will have more than twice that amount coming to them in 1938, John H. Cooter, field manager reported Thursday.

Of an estimated 2,510 eligibles in Arkansas in 1937 only 212 have claimed benefits. Claims paid or forwarded in 1937 totaled about $5,000 and as much as $56,000 may still be outstanding.

That wage earners (or survivors) are now wide awake to their rights under the Act is evidenced by the fact that for the first three weeks of January, 156 claims have been forwarded to Washington from Arkansas as compared to 212 for the entire year of 1937.

"Nearly 2,500 claims annually should arise in Arkansas according to actuarial estimates," Cooter stated.

He explained that these claims concern wage earners only and are not related to "pensions." They are not relief. They represent amounts due workers or their survivors as a matter of right. Those affected are wage earners in occupations covered by the

WASHINGTON, (AP)—A peace advocate told the house naval committee Thursday that President Roosevelt embarked in his Chicago speech last fall on a "policy of threat and bluff which can end only in humiliation or war."

Japan Modifies Position
TOKYO, Japan.—(AP)—Premier Prince Fumimaro Konoye and Navy Minister Admiral Mitsumasa Yonai conferred Thursday night on Japan's reply to the requests of the United States, Great Britain and France for information on Japan's battleship plans, which Tokyo newspapers said would be refused.

An official Navy spokesman, however, declared "if in the future a naval conference is called to discuss quantitative limitation as of first importance, it is likely Japan will join."

He expressed the belief Japan would participate in a formal effort to prevent a world naval building race.

U. S. Steel Renews Its CIO Contract

Competitors Cut Prices,
However, and Future
Is Uncertain

NEW YORK.—(AP)—The vast United States Steel Corp., faced with sudden price cuts by non-C. I. O.-organized competitors, Wednesday granted the C. I. O. an indefinite extension of its working contract, but left a way out for possible wage reductions.

Effect of the new "big steel"-C. I. O. treaty was to perpetuate the present contract, call for a basic $5-a-day minimum, but with the understanding that adjustment could be sought by either side and that, failing concurrence within 30 days on any such revision demanded, the whole agreement would end. Apparently the corporation decided to retain the status quo while it determined to what extent the price structure would be hampered.

Wednesday's price declines, which United States Steel's Carnegie-Illinois subsidiary followed, made the situation shape up like this:

Steel opponents of the C. I. O.—the independents—by lowering rates on some of their products took a step toward the low-price, high production economy demanded by Roosevelt administrationists. And this step came at a time when United States Steel faced the hour of decision as to whether to continue with the C. I. O.

Social Responsibility Is Asset Nowadays

ONE thing the past eight years have certainly done. They have developed a sense of social responsibility that never existed before, except in isolated individuals.

Despite all talk of economic royalists, there are few employers today who do not at least give a thought to the public results of their conduct of their private business. They are not always guided, and can not be guided solely by that thought, but it exists, it influences.

This doesn't mean that "bad" people have suddenly become "good." It simply means that in today's world a sense of social responsibility pays. No business generally regarded as against the public interest has any great future ahead of it. Social responsibility is simply a new factor in business which the smart business man must consider for his own good, even if not for any great love of humanity.

A TYPICAL example is the change in the tone of liquor advertising. "Pay your bills first," cries a prominent distiller in his newest ad. "No person should spend a cent for liquor until the necessities of living are provided—and paid for."

Is this firm trying to kill off its own business? Not at all. It is taking a long-range view. "The very existence of legalized liquor depends on the civilized manner in which it is consumed," continues the distiller. "In the long run, we believe, it is good business for us to say 'pay your bills first.'"

This same long view is being adopted by many other firms. There is a new conception of public good will in the air. That used to mean simply that many people were favorably inclined toward the particular product of the firm. But now it means more than that. The public must be sold on the idea that the firm is producing a useful and valuable product—that it is a socially valuable institution. Many firms have seen the light on this and are engaged in selling the public on the idea, and acting so that it can validly be sold.

MORE than ever before, every institution, public and private, is being called on to meet this ultimate test: "Is it a social asset? Does it help or hinder great numbers of people?" And as each year passes, more and more responsible people are realizing this. Such a change is one of the best hopes for the future.

What Service to Whom?

A CURIOUS proposal is being made. It is that Americans contribute to a Rudyard Kipling Memorial Fund, which when it reaches $1,000,000, will erect a statue to Kipling in England, endow a library at an English university, and provide certain traveling fellowships to young men "of the English-speaking world."

All this is to be as a memorial to Kipling "and his service to the English-speaking peoples."

Now Americans who have read and loved the Jungle Tales, and Kim, and the Light That Failed, might forget Kipling's freely-expressed contempt for Americans in a generous wish to honor Kipling, the author. But to honor Kipling's "service to the English-speaking peoples" is another matter. Before Americans honor any such services of Kipling to the English-speaking people who happen to live in North America, it would be an idea to have somebody tell just what they were.

Besides, Kipling himself denied that Americans speak a language that was more than barely recognizable to him as English.

Great Pains From Little Abrasions Grow If Prompt Care Isn't Taken

(No. 446)
An abrasion means any type of wound that breaks the skin. It is customary when anyone gets an abrasion to touch up the spot with iodine or some other antiseptic and then to forget about it.

The hazard of an abrasion may be more serious, depending on its association with certain types of industry. This is particularly true when one is constantly in contact with virulent infections and germs of one type or another. Inasmuch as an abrasion is the breaking of the continuity of the skin, it affords opportunity for the entrance of germs into the body.

There are cases in which doctors or surgeons have been seriously infected, or have died in two or three days as the result of a virulent infection sustained in this manner.

Germs which cause infection are usually the pus-forming germs like the staphylococci or the streptococci. The staphylococci form much thicker material than do the streptococci, but a serious streptococcal infection spreads much more rapidly, and may promptly invade the blood stream.

Most dangerous of all germs that can get into an open wound, however, is that of lockjaw. This is particularly hazardous when the wound is contaminated with dirt or material from clothing.

The safest rule with any abrasion is to clean it thoroughly at once, then to put on the antiseptic, such as tincture of iodine, or some of the other well recognized antiseptics, and then cover with sterile gauze so other infectious material may not enter. This is usually quite sufficient as first-aid for the ordinary breaking of the skin.

If, however, there is a large wound with ragged edges, or if the wound is contaminated with soil, gravel, or clothing, it is safer to have the attention of a physician immediately so that the wound may be properly cleaned, the roughened or torn edges cut away, and edges of the wound properly joined. This will not leave an unsightly scar.

Wounds of the interior of the body are, of course, far more serious than those on the skin. Some time the inside of the mouth or throat will be scratched by a bone from fish or fowl. Some time a small fish bone may be lodged in the tonsil. It is important to get this out because the damage it may cause before it is dislodged may lead to serious complications.

Also of serious character is an abrasion of the eyeball. When the front of the eye is actually scratched or damaged, the safest procedure is to cover the eye immediately with a piece of gauze, and to have the eye looked at and treated by a physician familiar with such conditions.

Oil Must Be On Toes

NEW YORK—Bill McKeechie of the Cincinnati Reds and other keen observers consider Mel Ott the best third baseman in the National League despite his inexperience at the position.

Ott had only one fault at the far turn after being brought in from right field last season, they point out. An outfielder plays back on his heels, and the versatile chap from Gretna has got to get used to being on his toes in order to come in for slow-hit balls.

Paul Harrison in Hollywood

A Jean-of-All-Movie-Trades Is New Danish Screen Beauty

HOLLYWOOD—Although she has appeared in only two pictures, Osa Massen, 20th-Fox's newest foreign importation, probably knows as much about movie making as any star in Hollywood. This is because acting was only a sideline with Miss Massen in her native Denmark. Her chief interest was cutting and film editing, and she also knows about photography.

Over here, though, it has been decided that the brown-haired, green-eyed little Dane must not hide her "umph" among the wheels and reels of the cutting department. From now on she's an actress; or will be as soon as she masters a little more English.

Five years ago, when she was just 19, Miss Massen won a surf-riding contest, together with the admiration of numerous news photographers who found her a very decorative subject. She knew a lot about cameras, so as soon as she had finished posing she asked the head of a small picture syndicate for a job. He was doubtful, but hired her, letting her splash around in a darkroom for two months before sending her out on assignments.

On that job she had to make the rounds of the Copenhagen studios in her home town of Copenhagen (which she spells "Kobenhavn" and pronounces "Coobenhovan"). After two years of photographing screen players, she was asked by a director how she'd like to be in the movies. Miss Massen replied that she'd like it, but not as an actress.

Does Some Cutting Up

So they gave her a job in the cutting room, and after that, it was a fairly simple matter to persuade her to act. The bait they held out was a chance to cut and edit her own pictures. Miss Massen's first flicker was "Kidnaped," the Palladium Film Com-

For Love of Polly

CAST OF CHARACTERS
POLLY CHELSEY, heroine; stranded in London when war breaks out.
JERRY WHITFIELD, hero; the Yankee who sees her through.
GILBERT BANKS, privateer captain.

Yesterday! The pretty woman and the man with the scarred ear enter the picture, but neither Polly nor Jerry are aware of the danger ahead. Polly thinks of Jerry.

CHAPTER VIII

JERRY went into the public room and sought out Mr. Toby, the innkeeper. "I'd like you to make out the bill for myself and my cousin, Miss Chelsey," he said. "We're leaving by the Dover coach in the morning."

"Sit down and drink an ale on the house," Mr. Toby invited. "I count none too fast."

Jerry accepted the offer and sat down at a table near the door, and when Mr. Toby had made out the bill he brought it there, accepting Jerry's money and making out a receipt.

The host had no sooner retired than Jerry Whitfield found himself with a companion. A large fellow with a battered face and torn ear, very unpleasant to see, came into the room from out of doors. He was wearing a hackney driver's uniform and he sat down beside Jerry without invitation.

After Jerry had finished his ale the man spoke to him. "It be a pleasant evening, sir, I'm sure."

"Yes," replied Jerry absently. His thoughts were with Polly above stairs.

It was then that the bewildering thing happened. A young woman came in from the street and looked around the room uncertainly. She was the woman in the blue bonnet who had waved to Jerry. She was looking for someone, and it was surprisingly turned out to be the man at Jerry's table who was drinking grog.

"Oh, there you are!" she said to the man in an imperious way. "I told you to wait in the hack! What do you mean by going off and leaving your vehicle this way, to drink grog in a tavern?"

"Mam?" replied the cabbie thickly. The young woman's face flushed and she stamped her foot with impatience. "Haven't you any feeling of responsibility for a passenger when you get one?"

Jerry stood up. "Can I be of some service, Mam?" he asked. The young woman looked at him and her face lighted in a quick smile. "Oh, it's you! How comical! How awfully comical!"

"Why is it?" Jerry asked, puzzled and embarrassed.

"Because I saw you on the street an hour ago and mistook you for a friend of mine, a lieutenant in His Majesty's Navy. I waved at you as brazen as could be, and you looked surprised. There was a girl with you, such a tall pretty thing, and she was none too pleased, I noticed. The strange young woman laughed so contagiously that Jerry joined in.

He said to her then, "This man seems to have too much rum under his skin. I'd better find you another chair."

She considered this for a moment. "No. Wait. All my parcels are in this fellow's hack. Couldn't we sober him up?"

"We can try," Jerry replied. He went to the barmaid and asked her to get a mug of strong coffee from the kitchen. "No, get three cups," he added, thinking he could do very well with some coffee himself and probably the young woman would feel the same way.

THE coffee sobered the cabbie remarkably. He seemed to remember his responsibilities as soon as he had downed it.

"Do you think he's all right now?" the girl asked Jerry.

"Yes, I'll put you in the hack," Jerry said, offering her his arm. He was still thinking of Polly, and how a thing like this must never happen to her.

And so it was that the young woman in the sky-blue bonnet and the sky-blue dress that was cut square at the neck walked out of the Unicorn and Crown Tavern on the arm of the American seaman, Jeremiah Whitfield, whom she had been paid to dupe.

Her name was Mazie Miller (or so she had called herself on the stage) and her love of money frenetically got the better of a natively soft heart. She had been a fairly good singer in the music halls before she married the owner of the Sheaf of Wheat Tavern that stood on the edge of town on the road to Plymouth, and she'd not lost her looks or her fetching ways. She was devoted to her husband, a gross handsome fellow with a grasping nature; she not only aided him by serving as barmaid of his tavern but by hiring out as a lure for the press-gangs as well.

"But only in the more genteel cases," she would tell you.

Well, Mazie admitted, this was a genteel case and no mistake. Jeremiah Whitfield was a gentleman and there was no need at all to put him in his place. She smiled up at him impersonally, and said:

"This is mighty good of you, sir. I just wish my husband could thank you personally. . . . Where's the hack, Cabby? I'm so turned around I can't remember where it was I got out of it."

"Down this way," the man said. "What? Down that side street?" Jerry said, "You wait here, Mrs. Smith. I'll fetch the rig to you."

"Oh, no," she answered hastily. "Just take me to it. That will save time."

THE street was dark, so surprisingly dark that Jerry Whitfield commented on it. "London's a poorly-lighted city, it seems to me."

"Sometimes the sperm oil gives out in a lump," the girl said, "and then the lighters have to go fetch more. You're not a Londoner I take it, Mr.—Mr.—"

"Whitfield. No, Mam. I'm used to smaller places."

The driver walked to the rear of the hackney coach. To the crouching figure he encountered there he spoke a few hissing words out of the side of his mouth.

Mazie Miller knew what went on there, and her heart revolted. There was yet time to save this kind, blundering young man who had risen to her distress as a fish rises to bait. She thought of the girl who had been with him today in the park and on the bridge—the tall pretty creature who evidently loved him with all her heart. . . . Not she would not think of that girl! She would think only of the five pounds that this business would yield her and that she could proudly take home to her husband.

It was thought of this unworthy mate of hers that brought Mazie to earth and turned her again into a woman of business. She pretended to grope for the hack step. While Jerry was pointing it out to her, the crouching figure back of the hack moved in a cautious orbit through the darkness and closed in on him.

A cudgel wrapped sparsely in rags came down on Jerry Whitfield's head from the rear and he crumpled without knowledge of what had happened. Never did man lose consciousness with so little concern for himself. But through the confusion of his mind, before utter darkness engulfed him, there passed the terrible meteoric thought of Polly Chelsey, waiting for him . . . waiting . . .

"A fine job, Miss!" the torn-cared man said to Mazie.

"Hush!" she sobbed furiously, "and give me my money! This is my last job, do you understand?" (To Be Continued) pany's exploitation of the Lindbergh case. Another, in which she was both star and film editor, was "Behind the Scenes in Copenhagen." The remainder of her two and a half years with the studio was spent as a cutter of other pictures.

Meanwhile, she had been spotted by Cecile Clovelly, foreign talent scout for Paramount. Miss Massen made three trips to London for screen tests, but the studio sent word that it already had too many foreign players and couldn't use her. However, the test were seen by Sam Eagle, 20th-Fox director visiting London. He telephoned Hollywood, declared he had made a terrific discovery and asked permission to sign her. He got it.

In London, seven months ago, Miss Massen joined a public speaking class through the aid of a friend who filled out the application. She attended every class but did no speaking; just sat in the back row and listened. When she arrived in Hollywood the day after Christmas, her new employers discovered that she knew a lot of big words and resonant phrases, but little of the language of the movies.

Under Florence Enright, studio dramatic coach, she's learning fast. In a couple of weeks she's take another screen test, for direction, and after that expects to go into a picture.

Leaves to Eat, and Eat
Miss Massen hasn't had any dates yet, nor has she seen the inside of a night club. There'll be plenty of time for those things, and she already has decided that American men are charming.

The actress is 5 feet 5 inches tall, weighs 110 pounds, and never worries about her weight. She says Dones are famous for large appetites and the fact that their made-up women smoke cigars. She doesn't smoke, but she eats everything, and often.

Miss Massen smiles when she talks, and looks you straight in the eye. She doesn't use nail polish or much makeup. She walks aloft, and swims, but her chief hobby is catching and mounting butterflies. Kindhearted, she catches 'em just before a storm, because the rain would kill them anyhow.

A Book a Day By Bruce Catton

A "Transgressor" Talks of Tropics

Whatever evaluation you place on Negley Farson's newest book, "Transgressor in the Tropics" (Harcourt Brace $2.50), depends on whether you read his first best-seller.

If you compare it with "Way of a Transgressor," frankly, it lacks the verve and the pulse of that extraordinary volume. Consider it, on the other hand, solely on its own merits, forgetting Mr. Farson's first effort, and you'll find it one of the lucid, outstanding travel books of the new year. For Negley Farson is at heart a reporter and in this new book he has culled some amazing fact pictures of the South America of today. He went to the tropics to interview the presidents down there and the result is a brilliant exposition of the problems of Colombia, the Argentine, and Brazil.

You will go far, for instance, to parallel the striking personality interviews he puts down, such as the visit with Dr. Alfonso Lopez, Liberal president of Colombia. Mr. Farson pulls no punches in his saga of the Wall Street "carpet-bag" loan men who invaded South America in the lush '20s, and the whole ripe story is a new revelation of a continent which is growing increasingly closer to United States.

As a "transgressor" in this book, Mr. Farson was pretty much a failure. His worst experience was a night in a stinking Cuban jail. The book is misnamed, but under any other title the story would still leave the reader with an appetite for more of Farson's writings. P. G. F.

RAISING A FAMILY

By Olive Roberts Barton

Most Films Are Harmless, Unless Attending Shows Becomes Child's Obsession

Raising a Family (No. 10)
Now let's look at the movies. The old cry of keeping the children away has lost its meaning. Moving pictures today are good, excellent.

I used to hammer the vamp and gong pictures as hard as anybody. I tried to preach to mothers that if things continued as they were, to keep their children away altogether.

However, the public itself arose with a few vegetables after a while, and Hollywood awoke one day to the fact that they would have to do something about it. Now they are still rubbing their eyes, unable to believe that Kipling and Stevenson, who were there all the time, are such horrid influences.

There are still the sophisticated pictures that children have no business seeing. Besides, boys can get the wild-west stimulus into their veins to the exclusion of good general nourishment. But it is not the difficult job to find suitable shows today that it was a few years ago. For this, mothers, be very thankful.

Nevertheless, they fit into the same category as most other pleasures in life. They can be dreams. They can be escapes. They can be sure poison the minute they get to be so important to man, woman or child that everything else goes by the board.

I wouldn't allow mere picture shadows to become proxies for first-hand living, or allow the children to sit days after day infusing their personalities in hero and heroine stuff. It only leads to dissatisfaction with life as it is, and life as it must be.

Temperance is one of the most important factors in character development, and children today are inclined to be intemperate in their amusement hunger. If they can take pictures or leave them, then no harm is done; but when movies become an obsession, then I should slump down.

The gap must be filled, so here is our old friend "substitution." Why not make plans for parties now and then? Take the children to the zoo, to ball games, marionette shows, junior concerts or special exhibits, for a change. Try an art gallery, even. This last they will hate with all their hearts, I predict, but do it anyway.

Actually, I believe our world to be pleasure infected. Ready-made fun should be part of life, but not two-thirds of it. Let them provide much of their own fun.

Movie-mad children get nervous. You wouldn't notice it, but they do. They are young, and they can't have enough playing tunes all up and down their spines for hours every day without some sweet and tear to their feelings. I suggest putting a limit on cinema thrills, depending on age, temperament and lessons.

The Promise

There's always a promise of better things.
'Tis February that holds the buds of Spring.
There's always a promise of better things.
Though over your life the shadows cling.
When all the summer's job is gone
And clouds hang thick for days along.
The fog is damp and cold and gray.
The job of life is behind you say.
Just look at the bushes and buds on the way.
The buds are forming already for May;
They are the promise of coming Spring.
There's always a promise of better things.
In the winter that makes your life so bare
Look well and you'll find the buds hidden there.—Selected.

Modern Valentines Tell Same Old Story

But Be Wary, Mister; Gals Aren't Waiting for Leap Year

By the AP Feature Service
Valentine's day 1938 are clipped and modern, but they tell the old, old story just the same. Extravagant sentiment and effusive messages are gone, but the "I Love You" idea runs through them all, though often it's in slang.
You can't do away with hearts in the decorations. You won't find so many bright red ones this year, though. They're likely to be in shades of blue or grey—even orchid. Sometimes they're outlined with gold or silver, or veiled with metallic mesh in deference to the modern mode.
Notable among this year's valentines is the increasing number of cards for exchange between husband and wife. There are the more serious expressions of affection embellished with designs of artistic merit, or gaily casual cards with sprightly sketches.
Particularly striking is the number of cards for girls to send to their boy friends. They're even arching for Leap Year. Some of them are amusing suggestions of romantic regard, others are in the frank spirit of warm affection.

George Higgins, in charge of the Tucker farm, said that Brockelhurst succeeded in knotting a bed sheet around his neck one night while he kept the bed covers pulled over his head. As the guard left the building momentarily for wood, Brockelhurst climbed up the steel bars of his cell and hastily fastened the other end of the sheet to a bar running over the top of the cell. Then he dropped.
Another condemned man in the same cell was aroused by the noise. He lifted Brockelhurst from the floor, preventing strangulation. Then he carried the youth to a barred partition where another condemned man, reaching between the bars, removed the sheet.

Italy's Star Plays Domestic Role

Years of stage successes for striking Maria Abba, Italian star, were climaxed in a new role for her with a Cleveland marriage to wealthy American, Severance Millikin, one of the Ohio city's most eligible bachelors. Mr. and Mrs. Millikin, shown above after their wedding, met in New York more than a year ago when Signorina Abba first appeared in this country. The bride, best known as the Russian grand duchess in "Tovarich," laughed when asked if she would give up her career.

THEATERS

At the Saenger
Described as more thrilling than her recent "Marked Woman," or the "Dangerous," which won her the Academy Award as the best actress of 1935, is the Warner Brothers melodrama which brings Bette Davis today to the Saenger theater.

It is called "That Certain Woman," and depicts the blonde star as the widow of a gangster killed in the notorious Valentine's Day massacre in Chicago. It takes Bette through many tribulations and persecutions, and shows her battling her way bravely toward peace and happiness.
It is said to be a most unusual sort of play. It was both written and directed by the celebrated Edmund Goulding, who not only did both of those jobs but also composed a theme song which Miss Davis sings.
"That Certain Woman" has as its romantic hero Henry Fonda. In it also are such distinguished players as Ian Hunter, Anita Louise, Mary Phillips, Hugh O'Connell and Donald Crisp, so it might be called an all-star production.

HE SEES WHO BUYS WHAT TOBACCO

Like so many other independent experts, Bill Whitley, Tobacco Auctioneer of Henderson, N. C., smokes Luckies

WILLIAM D. (BILL) WHITLEY sold over 15 million pounds of tobacco last year. It's easy to see that he's an expert who knows tobacco.

So it's important to you when he says... "At 14 different markets in Georgia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee and Kentucky, I've seen Luckies buy the best tobacco. I figure it's good tobacco that makes a good smoke. So my own cigarette is Lucky Strike!"

"I've noticed, too, that independent buyers, not connected with any cigarette manufacturer, smoke Luckies more than any other brand."

Mr. Whitley is correct. For sworn records show that, among independent tobacco experts, Luckies have twice as many exclusive smokers as have all other cigarettes put together. Remember: The men who know tobacco best smoke Luckies 2 to 1.

HAVE YOU HEARD "THE CHANT OF THE TOBACCO AUCTIONEER" ON THE RADIO?

When you do, remember that Luckies use the finest tobacco. And also that the "Toasting" process removes certain harsh irritants found in all tobacco. So Luckies are kind to your throat.

1,000 Movies in 5 Years —That Makes It a Hobby

COLUMBUS, Ohio. (AP)—Dante Caldararo, 25, and a bachelor, likes movies so well he has attended 1,000 performances in five years, which he thinks makes it a hobby.

Caldararo keeps a record of the pictures he has seen, the amount of money spent to see them and the ones he judges best.

He rates Fredric March as his favorite actor and Claudette Colbert leads his choice of actresses.

He thinks "Les Miserables" is the best picture he has seen and he liked "The Sign of the Cross" so well he saw it five times.

Caldararo's votes for the best acting during 1937 go to March in "A Star Is Born" and Barbara Stanwyck in "Stella Dallas."

Caramel Icing
A spoonful of thick cream added to caramel filling that has become too hard to spread on cake will make it soft and creamy again.

Devil's Food Cake
1/2 lb. chocolate
6 tablespoons boiling water
1 cup sugar
1 egg yolk
Mix and boil until smooth, using double boiler.

2 cups sugar
1 cup milk
1 cup lard
4 cups flour
6 eggs
1 tsp soda
2 tsp cream tartar
1 tsp vanilla
Cream lard and sugar, add beaten eggs, then the chocolate mixture. Alternate the milk with dry ingredients. Add flavoring. Bake in moderate oven.

Mailing a Cake
After wrapping the cake in waxed paper place it in a box, surrounding it on all sides with popped corn. This not only protects the shape of the cake but also preserves the moisture, preventing the cake from becoming dry.

Washing Windows
When washing windows use baking soda. In the place of soap, let dry and then take a cloth and shine. It is also good to wash glass wear.

U. S. A. Stew Pot
1 can Arkansas famous tomatoes
1 1/2 lb. Texas ground beef
1/2 cup Kansas lard
1 cup Missouri green peas
1 cup Iowa's corn
2 California white onions
3 large Colorado potatoes
Boil beef 1/2 hour in 1/2 gallon of water. Then add quartered potatoes, onions, peas and continue to boil 1/2 hour. Last add tomatoes, lard, salt, corn and chile powders. Cook slowly till potatoes are tender. People say stew is their favorite winter dish.

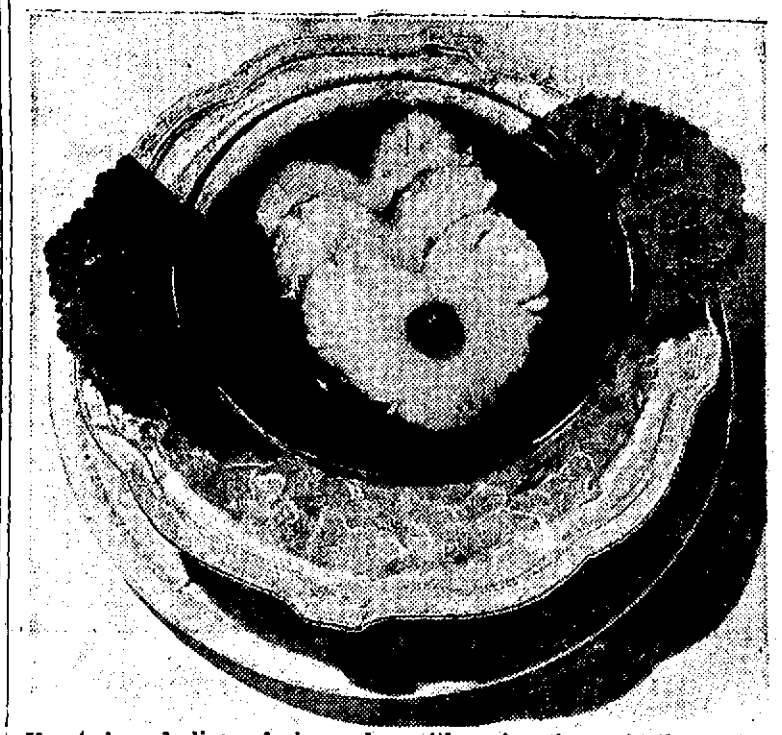

Pimento Sandwich Filling
10c can pimento
10c cheese
2 eggs
5 teaspoon sugar
5 teaspoon milk
5 teaspoon vinegar
Grind cheese and pimento together, beat egg yolks, add to cheese, add sugar, milk, vinegar, cook until thick, let cool and fold in egg whites. This makes about a pint of pimento cheese. This will make over a dozen sandwiches and is delicious.

Pat Roast

Time-Tried Loves Still Rule in Heart of Valentine Menu

Heart-shaped slices of pineapples, with a ripe cherry in the center, are covered with port wine to make this appropriate party dessert. Arranged in a shallow glass dish, placed on a bed of cracked ice which is garnished with calyx leaves, it's a Valentine good enough to eat.

(From Hotel McAlpin, N. Y.)

By MRS. GAINOR MADDOX
NEA Service Staff Writer

It isn't true what they say about love. Love has definitely not gone streamlined. Lovers still dote on chicken salad, fancy cakes and ice cream. Especially on St. Valentine's day.

If you plan a buffet supper for the 14th of February, supply yourself with lots of lacy valentines, with red hearts and tender sentiments, and a few good old-fashioned recipes.

All of which is not mere guessing; for several weeks I have asked caterers to the elite and makers of Valentines to the millions. They all say that we still like our love served up in the Dresden china manner.

Chicken Salad
(Serves 10 to 12)
Four cups diced chicken, free of skin and gristle, 1/2 cup chopped sweet pickles, 1 cup diced tart apples, 1/2 cup chopped celery, 1/2 cup mayonnaise, 1/2 cup heavy cream, 2 hard cooked eggs, chopped, 1 teaspoon salt, 1/2 teaspoon pepper.

Beat cream slightly, then combine with mayonnaise and beat until of the right consistency. Combine with all the other ingredients. Season delicately but enough to give character. Chill and serve in your grandmother's best Dresden salad bowl, the one with pink and white cupids entwined in garlands of fragile flowers.

A large white layer cake with boiled icing into which has sunk a drift of freshly grated coconut should follow. Spread your icing between the layers and then dredge with the grated coconut. Use the moist can-dye if you haven't the heart to grate a fresh one. Then cover the entire outside of the cake first with icing and then with coconut. It's a sight to bring tears to a lover's eyes—tears of happiness, of course.

You have your favorite ice cream recipe. However, just in case you don't want to follow the chicken salad, cake and ice cream tradition too closely, serve Pineapple au Porto for a sweet. It's cut to the occasion.

Pineapple au Porto
(Individual serving)
Two slices canned pineapple, ripe cherry, port wine.
Two slices canned pineapple, ripe

cherry, port wine.
With a sharp knife, cut the slices of pineapple heart-shaped, making one a little smaller than the other. Stand the slices in port wine for several hours. For serving, arrange in a shallow glass dish, one on top of the other. Place the pitted cherry in the center of the top slice. Then pour over some of the port wine. It's just a love of a dessert, young ladies!

Bodecaw's Winning Streak Is Broken

Bobcats Take Thrilling 39 to 33 Victory Here Wednesday

Bodecaw High School's winning streak of 16 consecutive games was broken here Wednesday night by the Hope High School cage team which won a thrilling 39 to 33 victory over the Bobcats.

With the game tied 33-33 with two minutes to go, the Bobcats hit the basket for three quick field goals and then formed an air-tight defense to hold the Badgers in check.

The battle was hard-fought and close all the way. The Badgers, probably the best team to show on the high school court this season, held a 9 to 7 margin as the first quarter ended.

The Badgers maintained their slim lead in the second quarter, the half ending in favor of the visitors, 16 to 14.

Baker, Bobcat sensational guard, went on a scoring spree in the final

Texas Aggies Whip Baylor Cage Team

Thrilling Contest Ends With Cadets Leading, 48 to 46

COLLEGE STATION, Texas.—(AP)—Baylor, undefeated in five straight games, fell 48 to 46, by fraction of second to the Aggies in an overtime game Wednesday night.

Not until officials, coaches and timekeepers had conferred after the game did the crowd, more than 3500 which packed the Aggie gym, know the winner.

Hub Kirkpatrick, Baylor center, made a crisp shot for the tying points, but Timekeepers Walter Penberthy of the Aggies and Frank Bryski of Baylor ruled the gun had failed to go off but that Penberthy had blown the whistle before the ball fell. Kirkpatrick's hands. The crowd, which had remained standing during the entire second half and the overtime period, milled around the floor for 15 minutes after the game.

Going into the second half trailing 17-18, Baylor gave the signal for one of the wildest melees in Aggie cage history by taking the lead on Buck Avery's two free throws in the first minute. Neither team led more than three points during the entire second period, the lead changing 10 times and the score being tied 10 times.

Sophomore Sammy Dwyer's goal with only 20 seconds regular playing time remaining gave the Aggies what appeared to be the winning lead, but Dobba Gernand's long shot from the side of midcourt knotted the count again just before the gun sounded.

The lead changed four times and the score was tied twice in the extra period. Kirkpatrick made two free tosses to give Baylor a 46-45 lead with one minute to go, but Freeman Bulkerkamp, sub guard, goalied with half a minute remaining and Dwyer added a free toss with 15 seconds to go.

Agiess held a 43 to 4 lead midway of the first period, but the Bears only left the Cadets ahead only 18-17 at half.

Arkansas Frosh Defeat Oklahoma Aggie Cagers

STILLWATER, Okla.—(AP)—The Oklahoma Aggie freshmen suffered their second loss in two days when they were trounced by the University of Arkansas yearling quintet, 34 to 27, Wednesday night.

The Aggies were ineffective without the services of Gene Smelser, forward, who was out of the game with a face injury. Howard Francis, center, led the Aggie attack with seven points.

Frieberger, Arkansas center, counted 11 points, while the Babcock forwards divided three points among them. Adams and McCormick, Arkansas guards, each marked up 10 points.

The Forkers led at the half, 14-10.

Crisler Is Named Coach at Michigan

Gets Athletic Directorship as Well as Head Coaching Job

PRINCETON, N. J.—(AP)—Herbert Orrin (Fritz) Crisler resigned his post as head football coach at Princeton University Wednesday night and announced he has accepted a "similar position" at the University of Michigan, "with additional duties in athletic administration."

It had been reported that Crisler's previous hesitancy at accepting the Michigan post was based on the fact that he wanted the athletic directorship, as well as the coaching berth.

In his statement Wednesday night, he pointed out that the "new position," which included "added duties on athletic administration," was "presented to me last Monday."

"This has been a most trying decision for me to make," he added, "in view of the kindly expressions of feeling on the part of the administration, faculty, alumni and students of Princeton."

"However, Michigan presents such a far-reaching opportunity that it was difficult to do anything but accept."

Jim Ripple Is More Than Team Man

New York Giant Player Did Much in Pennana Campaign

NEW YORK.—(NEA)—Baseball men describe Jim Ripple as one who never will be a great player, but a team man and leader beyond compare.

This estimate of Ripple's ability may be correct, but there were periods last season when the New York Giant outfielder seemed as great a player as one could want.

The red-headed Ripple filled the gap in right field after Mel Ott was pulled in to play third base. The year before he delivered in center field after forcing attention by his pinching. In the two campaigns since the famous home-sunder of Export, Pa., was purchased from Montreal, he has helped the Polo Grounders to two pennants.

He led the club in hitting last season and was second only to Ott in driving in runs.

Ripple's best remembered feat was that ninth-inning homer with two on against the Chicago Cubs in the opener of a double-header at the Polo Grounds, August 22. The Braves arrived leading the National League and very close. They were off to a 1-0 lead, but the Giants tied the game in the fourth, with Ripple's home run clinching a five-run rally. Ripple in the 11th scored the run that was 9-7.

The Giants went on to take the nightcap, and less than a week later were leading the parade.

This Blind Boy Stars On Mat and in Class

PHILADELPHIA.—(NEA)—Bob Allman, 126-pound wrestler of the University of Pennsylvania, was rendered totally blind by a blow on the head when he was in grammar school. Despite the handicap, he has made a fine scholastic and grappling record, and intends to continue his studies through law school. Last year he reached the finals in the Eastern intercollegiate mat tournament. He is not doing so well this year, because the class generally is stronger. The only thing he asks is that he be put in contact with his opponent.

Allman asks no help in class. He uses a Braille note-taker, and does his own typing in his room. He likes to play cards, and gets along without aid, using a Braille deck.

The bookmaker's son was doing his home work. During the evening, his father glanced over the lad's shoulder and read what he had written: "Necessity is the mother of Invention." "Look here, son," he said, "don't you write any more of that nonsense. And you can tell your teacher tomorrow that there's not a word of truth in it. Everybody knows that Invention is by The Scientist out of Grey Matter."

Kidneys Must Free Blood of Acids--Poisonous Waste

Kidney ailments won't wear away—you've got to do something to help these delicate organs function properly again. It's the same way with bladder trouble.

You know that the kidneys when healthy filter the acids and poisons and thru the bladder discharge them from the body. When the kidneys don't do this properly there are a number of signals that call for prompt action. Backache is usually one of them and getting up two or three times a night is another. In some cases the palms of the hands are continually moist and puffiness shows under the eyes. Oftentimes the urine is scanty—highly colored or irritating.

It's best to act quickly. If you will go to your druggist and ask for a 35 cent package of "Ramon's Brownie Pills for the Kidneys" you'll be on the right track.

Most druggists think so highly of them that they gladly sell one package with a guarantee of satisfaction or money back—Ask for Ramon's Pills for the Kidneys.
